Voters Speak—Keep Our Confederate Monuments

Voters have sent a strong message to all politicians who are seeking elective office or seeking to gain re-election: "Hands off our monuments!" Within the last twelve months there have been nine ballot referendums in Virginia asking the voters if they want to keep Confederate monuments in place. The results are in: Virginia's voters spoke loud and clear. All nine referendums were won by those who want to preserve the South's honorable heritage. Votes in favor of keeping Confederate monuments ran as high as 87.4%. It should be noted that this positive, pro-Southern heritage vote came even after years of slanderous, anti-South, neo-Marxist propaganda spewing forth from the media, Hollywood, and academia!

The votes in Virginia are in line with national opinion polls that demonstrate over 52% of Americans (nationwide) thought that Confederate monuments should remain in place. In Southern States the percentage favoring keeping Confederate monuments is even higher! For example, a poll conducted by Louisiana State University found that almost 70% of Louisianians wanted to keep the State's Confederate monuments.

Politicians will be held accountable when they violate the will of "We the people." We the people of the South are rallying to the defense of all traditional, American values, especially our traditional Southern values of morality, family, and Constitutional government as established by the Founding Fathers.
