This is Radio Free Dixie! Diversity in the Old South and the Confederate States of America is one of the many untold stories of history. Take the story of Holt Collier who was born a slave in Mississippi and while still slave became famous for his hunting skills. He killed more bears than Davy Crocket and Daniel Boone combined. More importantly, at the outbreak of the War for Southern Independence Holt joined the 9th Texas Cavalry and served as a Confederate sharpshooter. And there was Confederate General and Chief of the Cherokee Nation, Stand Watie. And Captain Harvey, a practicing Jew, who was a leader in the Confederate battle to retake Galveston. The Sons of Confederate Veterans invite you to educate yourself about the South's proud history at MakeDixieGreatAgain.org and join with us to Make Dixie Great Again!
